KEKWICK William Darton (from J. McDouall Stuart's diary, 1862) "It gives me great pleasure to record my thanks to the two officers of the expedition for their cheerful assistance and care in the management of the party. To Mr Kekwick I am deeply indebted whom I appointed as Second in Command this being the fourth journey he has been out with me and the second as Cheif (sic) officer. Whom I have had cause to mention in my former journal in the highest terms of commendation which his excellent conduct throughout so fully merited and on this occasion he still retains the same high place in my estimation. He has had to perform an extra duty this time -- under his care and management I placed the provisions, which is a most important one, on the care of which depends the success of the expedition -- he has managed them to my entire satisfaction and full approbation. I also gave him the next place of honor and danger to myself -- the charge of the rear party... it is either in the front or rear that the natives will first make their attack."

(147, 27)

KEKWICK James

From (16) "He stayed as Bookkeeper till 1858 when he resigned his post to emigrate to Australia where his relatives resided. During his apprenticeship he was not successful in maintaining good discipline. But when this was not required in his office of Bookkeeper his genial nature made him a great favourite. He was the meteorologist of the school, the leader of conversation, an abstemious liver, a devotee of early morning bathing in the old bath in 'sunshine, storm and snows'. Tradition says he broke the ice in winter and the ferruginous film in summer."
