Further comments on Parkinson:

From B. Smith, Boyer lecture of 1980, Sydney 1980, p.26:

Reference to Sydney Parkinson's drawing of a Botany Bay native with marks on his arms and chest made to represent a cross.

From S. Parkinson, Journal of a voyage to the South Seas, facsimile, Adelaide, 1972:

"While others for want of a more innocent curiosity or amusement were indulging themselves in those sensual gratifications which are so easily obtained among the female part of uncivilized nations we find him gratifying no other passion than that of laudable curiosity." (121, p. vii)

Parkinson's comment on attitude of the ship's company to the natives of Otaheite: "What a pity that such brutality should be exercised by civilized people upon unarmed ignorant Indians." (121, p. 15)

Dr John Fothergill mediated in the dispute between Sydney's brother, Stanfield, and Sir Joseph Banks over ownership of Parkinson's journals and collections. (121)
